CAUTION

Mario Lee Lambert, a convicted felon, is wanted for his alleged involvement in the robbery of a cellular store in Knoxville, Tennessee. He is also suspected of being involved in other robberies throughout the United States.

On November 22, 2016, Lambert and four accomplices, who have since been arrested, allegedly robbed a cellular store in Knoxville, Tennessee. The suspects allegedly took three employees and one customer hostage, forcing them in a back room of the business at gunpoint. Once in the room, the hostages were forced to the ground, and their hands were zip-tied behind their backs.

On February 22, 2017, a federal arrest warrant was issued for Lambert in the United States District Court, Eastern District of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tennessee, after he was charged with Hobbs Act - robbery and using, carrying, and brandishing firearms during and in relation to a crime of violence.
